MEANWHILE, A SINISTER PLOT IS TAKING PLACE...

Count your gray hairs

A FALLING BODY EXCELLERATES AT SIXTY FEET PER SECOND UNTIL IT REACHES A MAXIMUM SPEED OF 120 MILES PER HOUR. ONCE THIS SPEED HAS BEEN ATTAINED, DEATH SEEMS IMMINENT. YET, IN THE ARCHIVES OF THE FACT-FINDERS, WE FIND PROOF OF SOME MEN WHO HAVE HAD SUCH FALLS AND SURVIVED, WITH THE HELP OF A DOUBLE DOSE OF MIRACLES. HOPE IT'S NEVER YOUR CLAIM TO FAME.

A Lieutenant from Memphis, Tennessee, can relate to his grandchildren a tale of one of the luckiest experiences of all time. His plane was shot down over Austria in 1945. While it plunged toward the earth, the officer took an unexpected nose-dive out of it — minus his parachute. Down he plummeted, down toward the Alps, 2,000 feet below. He landed in a deep, billowy snowbank from which he climbed uninjured.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

On December 7, 1946, a Washington, D. C. woman toppled from a fire escape on the fourth floor of the apartment house in which she resided. The next moment she found herself wedged in the bathroom window of a second floor neighbor. A clothesline on the third floor had blocked her fall. The rope snapped at one end, coiled around her legs and flipped her into the window. The woman suffered minor cuts, bruises, and a back injury.

BACKWARD FLIGHT.

A window washer was performing his duties on the seventh floor of the Notional Bank Building in Denver, Colorado. The buckle on his safety belt gave way, and at the very instant he fell, the cleaner hurled himself backwards with such force that he floated easily through the air, cleared a sixteen-foot space, and landed on his feet atop an adjacent four-story building. He broke both of his legs, but considered himself lucky, nevertheless. (1942.)

In 1792, a bricklayer fell from the fourth story of a house in Paris, landing with his feet on the dirt and his body in the stone courtyard. He bled from the nose and lost consciousness for a period of forty minutes. An examination at a nearby hotel disclosed that the man had great difficulty breathing, due to swellings about his chest. After eight days of treatment, the bricklayer made a complete recovery and returned to his home and his job.

The sergeant who parachuted from a plane over Fort Benning, Georgia, little realized that the results of his leap would bring him newspaper headlines and national prominence. While in mid-air, drifting toward the ground, his parachute collapsed, and he fell the remainder of the distance under his own power. Surprisingly, the paratrooper never lost consciousness in his downward flight, and hit the ground after falling a distance of 1,000 feet, approximately the height of the Chrysler Building. The fall left him uninjured, and the next day in the hospital he ran around his bed three times to prove to his wife that he had sustained no broken bones. Doctors examined him several times before deciding that he was all right and could leave the hospital.

DEATH DEFYING LEAP.

On August 8, 1948, a man parachuted from a plane over Canrae Air Field (Texas) at a height of 22,000 feet.

He lost consciousness just as he made his jump and came to, when he was only 200 feet above the ground. He saw tree-tops rushing up to meet him just as he pulled the release on his chute. Less than a second later, he hit the ground. The parachute, catching in the tree branches, helped break his fall in the nick of time. Once again a man had cheated death even to the extent of falling 21,800 feet with an unopened parachute.

The British Medical Journal reported in one of its issues, the case of a fifty-year old man, weighing 196 pounds, who fell a distance of 110 feet from the steeple of a church. In his descent he broke a scaffold pole in two, and fell through the wooden roof of an engine house below, breaking several planks, and landing upon some sacks of cement inside the house. When picked up he was unconscious, but regained his senses in a short time, and it was found that his injuries were not serious.

His left leg had been fractured, and there were contusions about his back and hips. Twelve days later he was able to leave the hospital with his leg encased in a plaster cast.

While working with his brother in a tunnel which issued on a mine shaft in a province of France, a mine worker forgot the direction in which he was pushing a truck, with the result that it went over an obstruction and down into the shaft, taking the unfortunate miner with it. He fell a distance of about 330 feet, landing in some mud and about three inches of water. He showed no signs of injury when helped out by his brother ten minutes later.

BABY CAPERS.

Under ordinary circumstances, a fall from the eighth floor of a building is sufficient to bring death, or if the victim is lucky enough to survive, the injuries sustained result in leaving the unfortunate person a lifetime cripple. In the case of the eight-month old son of an Air Force Lieutenant, such a fall from a Miami Beach hotel in March, 1944, left the child with a broken right leg and a slight neck injury. A cluster of bushes broke the infant's fall and saved its life.

BUT WE ALREADY INVESTIGATED EARLIER THIS EVENING! WE COULDN'T FIND A THING WRONG!

THEY MUST'VE BEEN TIPPED OFF! THEY NO DOUBT CLEANED UP THE GAMES WHILE YOU WERE THERE!

THEY'RE PACKED AND GONE BY NOW! I CAN SEND THE POLICE TO STOP THEM BUT I'LL NEED SOMEONE TO BRING SPECIFIC CHARGES AGAINST THEM!

WISE GUYS WOULD BE THE BEST ONES TO DO IT!

GIVE 'EM A GOOD BEATING! THEY HAVE IT COMING TO THEM!

"HEY, JOCK, CURLY! WAKE UP! SOMEONE'S OUTSIDE!"

WHO'S THERE?
